Ingredients

- ☐ 12 fresh jalapeno peppers, halved and seeded
- ☐ 8 oz cream cheese, softened
- ☐ 1 cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese
- ☐ 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
- ☐ 1/2 teaspoon smoked paprika
- ☐ 1/4 teaspoon salt
- ☐ 1 cup panko breadcrumbs

- ☐ 2 large eggs, beaten
- ☐ Cooking oil for frying or spray for baking

Instructions

- 1 Start by prepping the jalapenos: slice them in half lengthwise and carefully remove the seeds and membranes with a small spoon or knife. This step is crucial because it controls the heat level; removing the seeds reduces the spiciness while keeping the peppers flavorful. Be sure to wear gloves or wash your hands thoroughly afterward to avoid irritation. Setting the peppers aside, pat them dry with paper towels to ensure the filling sticks well later. ⌚ 10
- 2 In a mixing bowl, combine the softened cream cheese, shredded cheddar, garlic powder, smoked paprika, and salt. Mix thoroughly until smooth and well blended. This seasoning blend adds depth and balances the heat with smoky and savory notes. If you rush this step, the filling might be uneven, so take your time to get a creamy consistency that will melt beautifully inside the poppers. ⌚ 5
- 3 Fill each jalapeno half generously with the cheese mixture using a small spoon or piping bag. Make sure the filling is slightly mounded but not overflowing to avoid mess during cooking. This ensures every bite has a good balance of pepper and cheese. Place the filled jalapenos on a parchment-lined tray while you prepare for coating. ⌚ 10
- 4 Set up a breading station with two shallow bowls: one with beaten eggs and the other with panko breadcrumbs. Dip each filled jalapeno first into the egg wash, letting excess drip off, then coat thoroughly with panko, pressing gently to adhere. This double coating creates the crispy crust that contrasts perfectly with the creamy interior. Skipping the egg wash will result in poor breadcrumb adhesion and a less crispy texture. ⌚ 10
- 5 For frying: heat about 1 inch of oil in a heavy skillet over medium heat until shimmering but not smoking. Fry the poppers in batches, turning occasionally, until golden brown and crispy, about 3-4 minutes per side. For baking: place poppers on a greased baking sheet, spray lightly with oil, and bake at 400°F for 20-25 minutes until golden and crispy. Frying yields a crunchier exterior, while baking is lighter and easier. Avoid overcrowding the pan to maintain even cooking. ⌚ 25
- 6 Remove the poppers with a slotted spoon (if frying) or from the oven and let them rest on a paper towel-lined plate for a few minutes to drain excess oil and cool slightly. This resting step helps the cheese set a bit so it doesn't spill out immediately when biting in. Serve warm with your favorite dipping sauce or a simple ranch dressing for contrast. ⌚ 5

- 7 Optional garnish: sprinkle chopped fresh cilantro or green onions over the poppers before serving for a fresh herbal note that balances the richness. This finishing touch adds color and brightness, making the dish more inviting. 🍴 2
- 8 If making ahead, assemble and bread the poppers, then freeze them on a tray until solid. Transfer to a freezer-safe container and bake or fry directly from frozen, adding a few extra minutes to cooking time. This method keeps the texture intact and flavor fresh for later enjoyment. 🍴 0
- 9 Serve these jalapeno poppers as a snack, appetizer, or side dish with drinks or a casual meal. They're crowd-pleasers and perfect for sharing. Enjoy the balance of creamy, spicy, and crunchy in every bite! 🍴 0

Chef Tips

🍴 Wear gloves when handling jalapenos to avoid skin irritation.

Jalapenos contain capsaicin, which can cause burning sensations on skin and eyes. Gloves protect your hands from absorbing the oils, preventing discomfort and accidental eye contact later.

🍴 Pat jalapenos dry before filling to help cheese adhere better.

Removing excess moisture prevents the filling from sliding out and helps the coating stick evenly, resulting in a neater, crispier popper.

🍴 Use panko breadcrumbs for a lighter, crunchier crust.

Panko's larger flakes create more air pockets during cooking, which crisp up better than fine breadcrumbs, giving a satisfying texture contrast.

🍴 Don't overcrowd the pan when frying to maintain oil temperature.

Crowding lowers the oil temperature, causing soggy poppers and uneven cooking. Fry in batches for consistent crispiness.

🍴 Let poppers rest a few minutes after cooking before serving.

This allows the cheese filling to set slightly, preventing it from spilling out immediately and making them easier to handle.

☒ For baking, spray poppers lightly with oil to mimic frying crispiness.

The oil promotes browning and crunch without deep frying, making the recipe lighter but still delicious.

☒ Freeze assembled poppers before cooking for convenient make-ahead snacks.

Freezing preserves shape and texture, and cooking from frozen ensures freshness and ease when you want a quick snack.

Storage & Reheating

☒ Refrigerator

Store cooled poppers in an airtight container for up to 3 days. They lose some crispness but reheat well in an oven or air fryer to restore crunch. Avoid microwaving as it can make them soggy.

❄ Freezer

Freeze uncooked, breaded poppers on a tray until solid, then transfer to a freezer-safe container or bag for up to 3 months. Cook directly from frozen, adding extra cooking time to ensure thorough heating without soggy crust.

☒ Reheating

Reheat in a 375°F oven or air fryer for 8–10 minutes until heated through and crispy. Adding a light spray of oil before reheating helps restore crunch. Avoid microwaving to prevent sogginess.
